Literature
23	The children of the neighbourhood loved Charlie. They dug up worms for him and fed him. They watched for him every evening, shouting ‘Charlie’s home’ when he returned at sunset.
24	As a child, Ada Lovelace enjoyed science, writing and math. But what she liked most was imagining new inventions.
25	Grandmother said that it was the first time she had noticed the hands in the photograph but the narrator did not believe her because he knew that his grandmother had a good memory and must have remembered the incident.
26	The naughty girl used to go swimming in the canal which shocked her neighbours. They were shocked because girls did not go swimming in the canal during Grandmother’s time.
27	A peddler brought the books to the junk shop.
28	Yes, Papa planned to give some books to the children.
29	Ada met Charles Babbage when she was seventeen. Charles Babbage was a professor, inventor and mathematician. Ada and Charles had common interests and they enjoyed talking about maths and science.
30	After Charlie had had his bath, Zeke would allow him to snuggle with him. Charlie would then sleep between Zeke’s paws. Charlie would sometimes call out to Zeke, imitating the author’s voice. And when Zeke came running in expectation, Charlie would give his loud belly laugh. Charlie would also tease Zeke by pretending as if he was taking a pebble from Zeke’s precious collection. (Any two)
