Q.1	Section A: Reading	5 Marks
	People all around the world make sculptures. A person who makes sculptures is called a "Sculptor." Sculptors use many different materials. Sculptures can remind us of important events or people. Some sculptors make their sculptures from stone. They use a variety of tools to cut and shape the stone. Stone sculptures last a long time. Many of the world's oldest sculptures are made of stone. Wooden sculptures are made by many people around the world. Sometimes the wood is painted or decorated. Some sculptors work with metal. They hammer or bend it. Some sculptures are made by pouring melted metal into a mould. Clay is often used for making sculptures. When clay is wet,

	it is soft and can be shaped easily. Sculptures made from clay are baked at a high temperature in a special oven. This makes the clay hard. Some sculptures are made from materials that do not last a long time, such as ice, snow, or sand. Some sculptures are made to move! Wind sculptures have parts that move when the wind blows. Other materials used to make sculptures include soap, chocolate, and even butter! Sometimes the butter has wax mixed with it to stop it from melting.
